

Research BREAKS Sessions

All UNT researchers are invited to participate in a new research education series every first and third Thursday of the month. Each session will be led by a topic expert in the field in order to elevate best practices, while answering some of the most frequently asked questions by UNT researchers related to the topic. These hour-long discussions are a comfortable conversation where no question is too basic, too simple, or too complicated. Our team of research experts will bring the conversation topics to the researchers.
